

What's Happening at Cornell Farms

October/November, 2009

Things never seem to slow down at Cornell Farms. It's been so busy that we skipped an October Newsletter and went straight to November.

Pat spent two weeks in October in Southern Ontario attending a work related conference and Ontario Contact where Canadian performers market their acts.

While down there, she also spent a few days with her family celebrating her father's 80th birthday! Here's a couple of pictures of the event - one with all her sisters and parents and the other with Rebecca, her father and the first great grandchild.

It was also the 25th Anniversary of the Clover Valley Farmers' Market in Fort Frances. We had a celebration luncheon. One of the dishes was Cornell's

Beef Barley Soup. The recipe can be found on our website www.cornellfarms.ca

It's weaning time on the farm. Cows and calves have been brought in from the pasture and separated. Every animal is weighed and evaluated. It's a bit noisy for the first few days but eventually, things quiet down and the animals are put out on pasture again – only separately. Our calf crop this year is fantastic – the calves are huge and healthy!

Gordon and Jeannine traveled to Toronto to attend the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair. They met up with Rebecca and Garnet at the Northwestern Ontario booth to help promote one of our newest products – All Beef Summer Sausage with Cranberries.

Kim's been busy doing presentations around the region again. His most recent one will be in Thunder Bay in the next few days. He is speaking about local foods at the First Nishnawbe Aski Nation Food Symposium. Our Power Point skills are improving!
