

What's Happening at Cornell Farms

Fall, 2017

The summer has been very busy at Cornell Farms and now we find ourselves with an early winter. We had a great time in Scotland for the World Angus Congress. We spent one week together touring Scotland, attending the Royal Highland Show and Congress. Then Rebecca and Kelsey headed to southern England to visit the London and the Cornells; Garnet and Michelle did some more touring a Scotland; and Kim and Pat participated in the Farm Tours arranged by the Congress organizers. One of the highlights of the trip was visiting Kim's great-grandfather Pope's childhood home. Grandpa Pope homesteaded Cornell Farms in 1897 and built the signature red barn in 1915.

Our crops were great this year. Our soybeans ran about 40 bushels to the acre on some of our new tiling. We were really pleased with the results. We had two barn concerts this year - Keith and Renée and Joey Landreth. Both were well attended and a lot of fun.

Pat managed to get down to visit her family a couple of times this summer and enjoy watching some boat races off her parent's dock along the St. Clair River. Kim travelled there for an overnight this fall. Pat also had a quick visit to Ottawa for a Conference. Nothing very exotic but a nice chance to get away for a few days.

As usual, farm markets have been busy. Our new canopy and display freezer have been great. We have been working on a few new recipes as well. Our Whiskey Burgers are now available at our winter markets - just in time for the Christmas season and inspired by our trip to Scotland (we were greeted at every farm we toured by a piper and a dram of whiskey/scotch). Calves are now weaned and Christmas is just around the corner. Be sure to follow us on Facebook or Twitter to hear about the latest news at Cornell Farms.
